Design Award for oha communication

PR Agency's homepage rewarded with
"MyDesignAward"

Stuttgart (Germany) / Davis (CA, USA), October 24, 2009 – oha communication's website has been awarded at "MyDesignAward". This is community platform of more than 6000 designers that collect and evaluate websites from all over the world. oha-communication.com went online in June 2009 and offers information about the PR agency and its services. A press area for the clients provides journalists with an easy access to press releases and printable pictures.

"We wanted to create an attractive platform for journalists as well as current and perspective customers", says Oliver Frederik Hahr, founder of oha communication. "Lead by the principle 'form follows function' we kept the design and structure very clean and easy to use. This award shows: our website is not only informative. It also looks good"

The website is written in English to demonstrate the focus on international PR. It provides background information about the agency's team as well as their consulting and public relations services. In the press area each client's profile and project description is listed along with press releases and pictures in the "press area" section. This makes it easier for journalists and search engines to find specific information.

"MyDesignAward" is a consortium of more than 6000 designers from all over the world who collect and evaluate websites by rating them in the categories color, style, usability, and layout.
